BURNDOWN CHART FOR SPRINT 1:

BURNDOWN CHART FOR SPRINT 2:

Reflection Questions:

1. Did your estimations reflect the actual effort?

ANS)

Yes. The story point estimates reasonably reflected the relative complexity of the work. Smaller tasks such as reminders and notifications were given lower points, while more complex features such as recommendations and maintaining fast search were given higher points.

2. Was your backlog well-prioritized?

ANS)

Yes. The backlog was prioritized based on the importance and complexity of the features. Core mentor discovery, availability, booking, feedback, and platform quality features were given higher priority where appropriate, while simpler supporting features had medium priority.

3. How did your simulated sprint align with your plan?

ANS)

The simulated sprints aligned well with the planned work. Sprint 1 focused on mentor discovery, availability, booking, and initial notifications, while Sprint 2 covered the remaining notifications, interview feedback, and platform quality features. The planned stories were completed and moved through the workflow.

4. What insights did the burndown chart give about your team's capacity

ANS)

The burndown charts showed the amount of work planned for each sprint in terms of story points. Sprint 1 had 49 story points and Sprint 2 had 53 story points. Since this was a simulated sprint completed in a short period, the chart mainly demonstrated how sprint scope and remaining work can be tracked rather than providing a realistic long-term measure of team velocity.
